About me:

I am a Marie Skłodowska-Curie research fellow (2021-2024) with a project titled Transnational Maghreb and the International Prize for Arabic Fiction: Pluralism, inclusiveness, and peaceful coexistence in the contemporary Maghrebi novel — TRANSECT (supervisors: Prof Alessandro Saggiaro, Prof Najib Mokhtari, Prof Perry Schmidt-Leukel). I hold a PhD from Sapienza University of Rome. My field of expertise is Modern and Contemporary Arabic Literature, with a special focus on space in literary criticism and the way the Jordanian writer and critic Ghalib Halasa (1932-1989) dealt with narrative space in his oeuvre. My PhD was fully funded by Sapienza University of Rome.

Since 2015, I have carried out two smaller research projects: one about rap and protest music in the SWANA region in the aftermath of the 2011 uprisings, and one about nationalism and the novel in Jordan. Both projects have resulted in articles and conference presentations.

Between 2020 and 2021 I was research assistant at Sapienza University of Rome. I worked as a guest lecturer at the University of Macerata, where I taught courses in Arabic literature and culture and Arabic-to-Italian interpreting and translation (2019-2021).

Besides my academic activities, I am a literary translator from Arabic into Italian and founder and editor of the magazine "Arabpop. Rivista di arti e letterature contemporanee".
